

Justification for Revisions to Bylaw 182: University Committee on International Education

The University Committee on International Education (UCIE) was initially established in 1965 to provide faculty Academic Senate governance over the university-wide study abroad program.¹ At that time and for many years thereafter, the University's principal systemwide activities in international education took the form of the education abroad program, which is now called the University of California Education Abroad Program (UCEAP).² Given this, UCIE's bylaws have only covered faculty governance of student exchange programs associated with UCEAP. Over time however, and especially in the last decade, the University has expanded both its formal and informal international activities. While UCEAP's activities in student exchanges remain significant part of UC's international portfolio of international activities, it is no longer the principal expression of this activity, which now includes the enrollment of significant numbers of international students, formal and informal international research collaborations, international service learning by undergraduates, an increasing number of MOUs and other international agreements between UC campuses and institutional partners, and even Presidential Initiatives such as the recently formed Academic Planning Council's International Activities Working Group. The increase in these activities necessitates an expansion in UCIE's purview from a committee that simply oversees student exchanges through UCEAP to one that has an advisory role in all of the University's systemwide international activities. This advice is frequently given by UCIE to the particular Academic Senate Committee having the primary responsibility for some issue with an international component. With that in mind, the following justification will briefly describe UC expansion in international activities, the role of shared governance in such activities, and an explanation of the amendments being proposed.

Over the last decade, UC's international presence and engagement has expanded significantly. One example of this phenomenon is the growth in the enrollment of international students, which have risen from 9,576 in fall 2002 to 23,863 in fall 2013.³ The increase from just 2012 to 2013 was 37%. Although the University does not keep records on the international research collaborations by its faculty, data from the National Science Foundation (NSF) show that such collaborations on a national basis are increasing significantly. From 1997 to 2012, the number of science and engineering (S&E) articles in peer-reviewed journals by co-authors from different countries increased from 14% to 25%. The NSF now reports that 35% of U.S. S&E co-authored articles are international in scope.⁴ In addition, more and more students are now taking part in independent research activities abroad (usually with faculty), which have increased by almost 47% between 2010-11 and 2011-12.⁵ At UC, a number of internationally-themed Presidential initiatives have recently been launched as well. These include the UC Mexico Initiative, the Global Food Initiative and the Academic Planning Council's International Activities Working Group. These initiatives leverage the international activities already taking place on the campuses, such as UCSF's Global Health Sciences Group and UC Mexus to name only a few.

It is clear that a significant number of universities are internationalizing themselves, which necessitates the creation and maintenance of policy dedicated to international activities. For instance, a recent UC survey found that Harvard, MIT, Stanford, Yale, the University of Illinois, the University of Michigan, the University of New York at SUNY-Buffalo, and the University of Virginia have all instituted policies on international activities. Indeed, many of these universities have set up administrative committees to address such policy.⁶ Given that most international activity is driven by faculty interests and research and initiated and supervised by the campuses, it is essential that the Academic Senate not only be consulted, but play an instrumental role in forming such policy. Towards that end, Academic Council endorsed and sent the UCIE-drafted Vision Statement on International Engagement to President Napolitano last summer. UCIE also has a representative on the Academic Planning Council's International Activities Working Group, which is drafting a Presidential Policy on International Activities. Therefore, the proposed amendments to these bylaws formalize faculty governance in this area, as well as lay out reporting relationships between both Senate agencies and Administrative entities. First and foremost, the following bylaw amendments expand the UCIE's purview from simply student exchange associated with UCEAP to advising on international research collaborations, the welfare of international students and scholars, international engagement initiatives, UC educational centers abroad, and any experiential and service learning arrangements. Second, the new bylaws would allow UCIE to initiate policy proposals; the existing bylaws only allow UCIE to consider matters that are referred to it by the President of the University, the Academic Council, the Assembly, or a Divisional or any Senate Committee. Similarly, UCIE would now formally be designated as the liaising Senate agency between UCOP international policy working groups and Academic Senate leadership. Finally, the new bylaws formalize the consulting, reporting, and feedback mechanisms between UCIE and Administrative and Senate agencies.

² UCEAP should not be confused with the acronym for the original University Committee on Education Abroad Program or "UCEAP".

In proposing changes to its bylaws, UCIE is also trying to make its bylaws conform to those bylaws already in place at a number of Senate Divisional Committees on International Education (or their equivalents), as indicated below:

- UCI's Subcommittee on International Education has the authority to opine on formal educational activities of UCI students abroad, faculty exchanges between UCI and foreign universities, and other academic issues involving international education.
- UCLA's Committee on International Education both provides consultation to the International Education Office (IEO) and the Vice Provost, International Institute and serves as liaison between the IEO and Academic Senate leadership, helping to ensure that policies and procedures are appropriately vetted by the Senate.
- UCR's Committee on International Education advises the Division on various aspects of international education, including the well-being of foreign students and faculty at UCR, the participation of UCR in international exchange agreements, and the participation of UCR faculty and students in international research and educational programs other than the EAP.
- UCSD's Executive Committee on the Committee on International Education formulates policies and programs that will serve to better integrate international education into the campus academic programs.
- UCSB's Committee on International Education formulates a bi-annual survey of international students that helps guide UCSB's policy concerning this growing portion of the student body.

The Need for Resources

The change to the bylaws is mostly resource neutral since additional data collection and analysis can be done by the Academic Senate analyst and by using the data collection and analysis capabilities of UCEAP. The workload of the Committee increases which may call for a slightly increased number of meetings, a similar number as that of other Academic Senate Committees. The increased purview may also call for the Chair of the Committee to be a regular member of the Academic Council. The workload due to UCEAP will be streamlined by delegating more responsibilities to faculty committees, that currently handle most of the reviewing responsibility anyway. Most of the increased activity will be to advise on the international aspects of issues falling under the primary purview of other Academic Senate Committees. This is exactly what the committee has the expertise to do and can easily be delegated to the member of the Committee.

⁶ Harvard has set up one such policy committee, the University Committee on International Projects and Sites, which is mainly populated by a mix of faculty and administrators. See <http://provost.harvard.edu/university-committee-international-projects-and-sites>.

Report to the Academic Council and other agencies of the Senate and confer with and advise the President and agencies of the University Administration on matters concerning international engagement. The authority to approve and supervise these engagements (usually) resides with the campuses but the Committee has the expertise to advise on their aspects that need attention at the systemwide level. These engagements include:
